

Here at Knox, we have five awesome specialist teachers, and I like ALL of them!

Miss Griffith is our Africa Studies teacher, and she is one of my favorites because she lets us watch videos in every class! She also lets us make a bunch of crafts. She should really be called a “crafts” teacher because she is so good at them. We use so much glue, and a bunch of paper. Sometimes even scissors. But mostly just glue.

Miss Menghini is great too, but she only lets us watch videos a couple times per year. She tells us to keep our water bottles away from the laptops and tablets, and she teaches us to not get fooled by scams! Scammers might hack you if you click the “Yes” button.

Miss Johnson is our music teacher. She teaches us different songs for each holiday, and she lets us play instruments. ...Not fancy instruments like flutes, violins, or recorders – those are for the big kids. We get to play maracas, castanets, and, my favorite, the tone bells. I usually get to play the “E” tone bell. Oh, and Miss Johnson also lets us watch videos in every class! Yesss!

Mister Grimes is our PE teacher. The sad news is that he only lets us watch videos once in a while, but he makes up for it by letting us play different kinds of running games. First, there's Tag, where a few taggers chase the rest of the class around the field. If you get tagged, you have to do five jumping jacks before you get to run away again. Then, there's Tunnel Tag, which is similar to regular tag, except your legs transform into a tunnel that someone has to crawl through. Finally, there's my favorite, Toilet Tag. If you get tagged, you morph into a toilet, and someone has to flush your arm! It's lots of fun.

Last but not least is Miss Moran, our Drama teacher. She lets us make our own stories and pretend to be magical characters. We can be skeletons, mummies, ...anything we can imagine. A couple weeks ago, we were fluffy unicorns, trying to cross a stone bridge, while evil robots shot poisonous arrows at us. But the best part about Miss Moran is that she lets us watch videos of a person reading a book in every class.

All our specialist teachers are so much fun.
